Anthony T. Browder

Anthony Browder has conducted study tours to Egypt for 48 years. He now directs his attention to his first tour of London and Paris where he will visit the Egyptian collections in the British Museum and Louvre and offer tours of local sites of historical interest. This activity is billed as the "Why Kemet Matters Tour" which is the title of Mr. Browder's third volume of Browder File essays.

This tour will explore the Kemet influences on London and Paris and will include tours of the Black presence in both cities. It will conclude with public lectures featuring Browder and local community scholars in London and Paris. It is the perfect opportunity to see Egypt on the Thames and Seine and explore the African diaspora in Europe. You will learn that Kemet is not just in Africa. Kemet influences can be found all over the world and Mr. Browder will show you African history that has been hidden in plain sight.

Additional details on Browder's activities and publications may be found at www.ikg-info.com.
